Chapter 1 by Ice Fox

"And as she climbed through the trees and bramble-" Alyth was cut off by a small breath that was slowed into the pattern of sleep. She smiled and got up, closing the book she was reading to Sally. She walked out and softly closed the door after tucking her in. When she turned around, she was greeted by Ben, his angry stare looking her up and down. He never did trust her, and it was hard to believe he ever would.

"What are you doing in her room."

"I was reading her a bedtime story," she was telling the truth, Ales always had story books for her to read to the children. Ben growled and pushed her, walking away. He hated her. He hated everything about her.

She sighed, turning away to walk to her room when the danger that was lurking chopped at her arm. She yelped and yelled for someone, but before she could, the danger silenced her, dragging her away to the darkened closet by her hair.
